Induction of Rev. D.K. Allan

The Presbytery of High River met in Vulcan on Thursday April 30th. The Presbytery were out in force.

Those present were Revs. J. McInnes, Moderator; Wm. McNicoll, J. W. McKenzie, J. Kennedy, H. W. Toombs and D. K. Allan. Mr. H. F. Richardson and Mr. I. Terborgh, elders. It was a record attendance for a special meeting.

Members of the congregation entertained the various ministers for luncheon in their homes.

At two o'clock the Presbytery was constituted with prayer by the Moderator, and until three o'clock important matters relating to student fields were dealt with.

Then came the induction services. The Moderator placed the first part of the service in charge of the Rev. H. W. Toombs. The meeting was opened with prayer and praise.

After the reading of Scripture and another hymn Mr. Toombs preached from the text, 1 Cor., ch. 1, v. 22-24. It was a most thoughtful and forceful sermon, setting forth our source of power and wisdom in Jesus Christ.

The speaker said "the sinfulness of sin had to be pressed home to every heart. Our attitude here determines our attitude towards the crucified Christ." If we treat sin lightly, if it is a mere phrase in our natural development, then what Christ did for us will be foolishness and meaningless. Power and wisdom are desirable things. Every man and every nation need them and want them. In Germany the toast is always to the Army and University, representatives of power and wisdom. But Paul, the best educated and strongest thinker of his own age, if not of any age, associates power and wisdom not with external things but with Christ crucified, who is the Power of God and the Wisdom of God.

All through this well-ordered address the speaker thrust home its application to ourselves. It was an earnest appeal to get back to the rudiments of our faith in Jesus Christ.

After the sermon the Moderator put the various questions to the Rev. Allan, which, being answered satisfactorily, he proceeded to induct him in the name of God, and of the Presbyterian Church in Canada into the pastoral charge of Vulcan.

The various members of the Presbytery then rose and wished him God speed and much blessing in his work.

The Rev. Dr. Ferguson addressed the minister. In kindly words he spoke of Mr. Allan as a co-worker with himself for a number of years.

He then spoke from 1 Peter, 5, 1-4. In lucid and penetrating words he exhorted the minister to be a keen and earnest student of the Word of God. That amidst his varied duties he must take time for communion with God, and so fit himself for the work he is called to.

Not only is the flock to be shepherded, but the lambs also must be fed. Give the children your attention and care and so build up a useful and abiding ministry.

The Rev. J. D. McKenzie addressed the people. His remarks were very practical. He took the attitude of one in the pew. As a member, he would feel he had to be regular at the services, receive the message given and try to profit to the utmost by them. There would be no criticism of the minister before the children, if he had any advice or criticism to give, he would go to the minister and, like a man, would tell him what he thought.

Every word and suggestion went home. He was delighted to be at the wedding of the minister and people, and trusted it was to be a long and happy union.

The meeting was then closed with the benediction.

Immediately afterwards a social was spent, and the newly-inducted minister received a fresh welcome by his own people.

At a subsequent meeting Mr. Lindsay, on behalf of the congregation, moved a vote of thanks to the Presbytery for their attendance with them on this auspicious occasion in the history of the Church in Vulcan. The Moderator feelingly replied.

Taking Precautions

The Vulcan Co-operative Company are practically taking the lead in the town by installing the barrel of water system for the quelling of local outbreaks of fire. The manager, Mr. Lommatzsch, says that there will be at least ten barrels in the lumber yard, each placed in such a position as to be easily accessible in case of an outbreak of fire. The barrels will be sunk in the ground to within six or eight feet of the surface. Besides each barrel there will be erected a standard from which will be hung two fire buckets painted red. The lumber company's premises are at present being fenced off, and as soon as that is finished the barrels are to be installed.

Such ample precaution as this ought to appeal to all townspeople of Vulcan to act likewise.

There is some reason for these measures when it is known that the town narrowly escaped a fire about ten days ago. It was prevented, but that might not have so happened, and the result would have been quite otherwise.

The incident to which we refer is that some of the children round the town went into the Co-operative Co's lumber yard and lit a fire, ostensibly under the idea that they were camping out. The fire they kindled was laid beside a wood pile and they kept it going by the simple method of splitting shingles and throwing them on the blaze. A passer-by happening to see the smoke, went to find out what it was all about, and discovered the young campers at the work. He quickly destroyed the fire and gave the children something to remember in the way of a straight talk.

Now this just shows how very near we may be to fire at any minute, and the only way to safeguard ourselves is to be prepared.

The Ladies' Aid

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church met on Tuesday, April 28th, at the home of Mrs. Hall, when nine ladies were present.

Notwithstanding the attendance being smaller than usual, which is to be partly accounted for in the fact that Tuesday is not their regular meeting day, the meeting was productive of much.

The members decided to provide lunch for a social hour to be held after the induction of the Rev. D. K. Allan on the following Thursday, and arrangements were also made for the holding of a sale of Home Cooking which is to take place in Mr. Reeve's store on Saturday afternoon, the 9th of May.

Several ladies presented articles which they had made during the last month; each of these articles found a ready sale among the members.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the home of Mrs. F. A. Elves, on Thursday, May 28th.

A Scholar's Letter

In another column we publish a letter which was written by a Chinese boy to one in this town who was willing to teach him English. The letter has a half humorous incentive about it until we consider it was written by one, a foreigner, who has only been learning English for less than six months. Then it becomes something very serious, a laudable effort with which any of us would find it hard to compete. That is, could any of us, after six months' tuition in the Chinese language, make so good a showing? The handwriting of the letter is, certainly on a level with much of the handwriting one comes across in business. An example such as this shows that these Chinese boys once they get hold of the idea, are going to learn the language of this country, and the assiduity with which they apply themselves to the task is sufficient proof of their earnestness.

Incidentally, something should be said for the people who are sufficiently interested to undertake the educating of the boys. They are doing a real service, not only to the scholars, but to the community at large, and their labors, often conducted under difficulties and against odds, are worthy of every recognition and respect.

THE WINDOW AT THE WHITE CAT

She didn't mind it. Speaking as nearly as possible from an impersonal standpoint, I doubt if she was even surprised. You see, the ring was gone, and it had only been an engagement ring anyhow, and everybody knows how blinding they are.

And then an angel with a burning sword, came and scourged me out of my Eden, and the angel was Burton, and the sword was a dripping umbrella.

"I hate to take you out," he said. "The bottom's dropped out of the sky, but I want you to make a little experiment with me." He caught sight of Margery through the portiere.

"Don't be an ass," I said angrily. "I don't know that I care to go out tonight."

"Let's go and take a look at the staircase you fellows have been talking about," he said. "I don't believe there is a staircase there except the main one. I have hounded every politician in the city into or out of that joint, and I have never heard of it."

"Lightning never strikes twice in the same place," said Margery bravely. "I will ask Katie to come down with me if I am nervous, and I shall wait up for the family."

I went without enthusiasm. Margery's departure had been delayed for a day only, and I had counted on the evening with her. Burton's idea was to go over the ground at the 'White Cat' again.

"I don't hang so much to this staircase idea," Burton said, "and I have a good reason for it. I think we will find it is the warehouse, yet."

"You can depend on it, Burton," I maintained, "that the staircase is the place to look. If you had seen Wardrop's face today and his agony of mind when he knew he had associated 'staircase' with 'shot,' you would think just as I do. A man like Schwartz, who knew the ropes, could go quietly up the stairs, unbolt the door into the room, shoot Fleming and get out. Wardrop suspects Schwartz, and he's afraid of him."

"Suppose the stairs open into the back of the room? He was sitting facing the window. Do you think Schwartz would go in, walk around the table and shoot him from in front? Pooh!"

"He had a neck," I retorted. "I suppose he might have turned his head to look around."

We had been walking through the rain. The White Cat, as far as the blocks socially, was only a half dozen blocks actually from the best residence portion of the city. We had stopped near the arched gate where I had stood and waited for Hunter a week before. Suddenly Burton dashed away from me and I heard him splashing through a puddle in the gloomy yard.

"Come in!" he called softly. "The water's fine!"

The gate swung to behind me, and I could not see six inches from my nose. Burton steered me toward the building.

"If it isn't locked too tight," he was saying, "we can get in, perhaps through a window, and get upstairs. From there we ought to be able to see down into the club. What the devil's that?"

It was a rat. I think and it scrambled away among the loose boards in a frenzy of excitement. Burton struck a match. It burned faintly in the dampness and in a moment went out, having shown us only the approximate location of the heavy ratched double doors. A second match showed us a bar and a rusty padlock. There was no entrance to be gained in that way. The windows were of the eight pane variety and in better repair than the ones on the upper floors. We found one unlocked and not entirely closed. It shrieked hideously as we pried it up, but an opportune clap of thunder covered the sound.

While Burton held the window I crawled into the warehouse and turned to perform the same service for him. At first I could not see him outside. Then I heard his voice, a whisper.

"Duck," he said. "Cop."

CHAPTER XVII.

In the Room Over the Way

I dropped below the window, and above the rain I could hear the squish of the watchman's boots in the mud. He flashed a night lamp in at the window next to ours, but he was not very near, and the open window escaped his notice. I felt all the nervous dread of a real malefactor, and when I heard the gate close behind him and saw Burton put a leg over the sill I was almost as relieved as I would have been had somebody's family plate, tied up in a tablecloth, been reposing at my feet.

Unlike the first floor, the second was subdivided into rooms. It took a dozen precious matches to find our way to the side of the building overlooking the club and another dozen to find the window we wanted. When we were there at last Burton leaned his elbows on the sill and looked down and across.

"Could anything be better?" he said. "There's our theatre, and we've got a proscenium box. That room over there stands out like a spot light."

He was right. Not more than fifteen feet away and perhaps a foot lower than our window was the window of the room where Fleming had been killed. It was empty as far as we could see. The table, neat enough now, was where it had been before, directly under the light. Any one who sat there would be an illuminated target from our window. Not only that, but an arm could be steadied on the sill, allowing for an almost perfect aim.

"Now where's your staircase?" Burton asked.

I think it was then that Burton had his inspiration.

"I'll bet you a five dollar bill," he said, "that if I fire off my revolver here now not one of those fellows down there would pay the slightest attention."

"I'll take that bet," I returned. "I'll wager that every time anybody drops a poker since Fleming was shot the entire club turns out to investigate."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Burton. "Everybody down there knows me. I'll drop in for a bottle of beer, and you fire a shot into the floor here or into somebody across. If you happen to see any one you don't care for, I suggest that you stay and fire the shot, because if you went, my friend, and nobody heard if you would accuse me of shooting from the back of the building somewhere."

He gave me the revolver and left me with a final instruction.

"Wait for ten minutes," he said. "It will take five for me to get out of here, and five more to get into the clubhouse. Perhaps you'd better make it fifteen."

He went away into the darkness, and I sat down on an empty box by the window and waited. Had any one asked me at that minute how near we were to the solution of our double mystery I would have said we had made no progress, save by eliminating Wardrop. Not for one instant did I dream that I was within less than half an hour of a revelation that changed my whole conception of the crime. I had an idea that it would be hard to explain my position, alone in the warehouse, firing a revolver into the floor, if my argument was right, and the club should rouse to a search. I looked again at my watch.

Every one who has counted the passing of seconds knows how they drag. With my eyes on the room across, and my finger on the trigger, I waited as best I could. At ten minutes I was conscious there was some one in the room over the way. And then he came into view from the side somewhere, and went to the table. He and his back to me, and I could only see that he was a large man, with massive shoulders and dark hair.

It was difficult to make out what he was doing. After a half minute, however, he stepped to one side, and I saw that he had lighted a candle and was systematically reading and then burning certain papers, throwing the charred fragments on the table. With the same glance that told me that I knew the man, it was Schwartz.

I was so engrossed in watching him that when he came directly to the window I stood perfectly still staring at him. With the light at his back I felt certain I had been discovered, but I was wrong. He shook the newspaper that had held the fragments out of the window, lighted a cigarette and turned back into the room.

He was not alone, for he addressed some one in the room behind him.

"You are sure you got them all?" he said.

COAL FIELDS ARE IMPORTANT

Sir Ernest Shackleton's Discovery in Arctic Opens Up Great Possibilities

In a letter to the Royal Geographical society, Professor Edgeworth David said he did not believe the world yet realized the scientific as well as the commercial importance of the great coal field which Sir E. Shackleton discovered at the head of the Beardmore Glacier, and which contained probably as much coal as existed in all the unworked coal fields of Great Britain.

"Probably if a shaft were sunk at the South Pole, through the covering of snow and ice," added Professor David, "you would strike the continuation of this great coal field. It is in all probability one of the largest unworked coal fields of the world."

The possibility of a gold reef in the Antarctic regions was also mentioned by the speaker. It was almost certain, he declared, that a payable one would be discovered soon. Sir Ernest Shackleton outlined the objects of his forthcoming expedition. "This is the last thing left to be done."

There may be other corn cures, but Holloway's Corn Cure stands at the head of the list as far as results are concerned.

His Steady Eye

Clarence was a medical student, and had not learnt enough to understand that what he did not know would fill several large books.

One morning the house surgeon asked him to examine an eye that was in the head of a man who complained of great pain, and to report on the case later.

With a solemn air, Clarence adjusted the ophthalmoscope, and gazed seriously and long into the patient's eye. When at last there was no excuse for gazing any longer, he stood up and said:

"My dear sir—my very dear sir, if you will allow me to say so, you possess a most remarkable eye. I have never, in the whole course of my professional career—he had left school about six months previously—"seen an eye like it! Has a opinion ever been passed on it before?"

"Well—er, no, not exactly. But the man who shovelled it in said it was a jolly fine bit of glass!"

My Shadow

I have a little shadow that goes in and out with me
And what can be the use of him is more than I can see
He is very, very like me, from the heels up to the head;
And I see him jump before me, when I jump into my bed.

The funniest thing about him is the way he likes to grow;

Not at all like proper children, which is always very slow;
For he sometimes shoots up taller, like an india-rubber ball,
And he sometimes gets so little that there's none of him at all.

One morning very early, before the sun was up,
I rose and found the shining dew on every buttercup;
But my lazy little shadow, like an arrant sleepy-head,
Had stayed at home behind me, and was fast asleep in bed.

WANTED TO KNOW

The Truth About Grape-Nuts Food

It doesn't matter so much what you hear about a thing, its what you know that counts. And correct knowledge is most likely to come from personal experience.

"About a year ago," writes an Eastern man, "I was bothered by indigestion, especially during the forenoon. I tried several remedies without any permanent improvement."

"My breakfast usually consisted of oatmeal, steak or chops, bread, coffee and some fruit."

"Hearing so much about Grape-Nuts, I concluded to give it a trial and find out if all I had heard of it was true."

"So I began with Grape-Nuts, cream, soft boiled eggs, toast, a cup of Postum and some fruit. Before the end of the first week I was rid of the acidity of the stomach and felt much relieved."

"By the end of the second week all traces of indigestion had disappeared and I was in first rate health once more. Before beginning this course I diet. I never had any appetite for lunch, but now I can enjoy the meal at noon time."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

A Conclusive Statement

Dr. Maus, chief surgeon of the eastern division of the American army, not long ago made public a report, in which he recommended that "no one who uses alcoholic beverages should be appointed to any important position, civil or military, to the command of military or naval forces, or any other position of importance and responsibility."

In reference to the positive evil effects of the use of alcoholic drinks, Dr. Maus says:

"It lessens the working capacity, marching endurance, accuracy, and rapidity of movement, ability to command troops and solve military problems, to navigate and manoeuvre vessels, to perform administrative work properly, to develop the intellect, and fit one for the higher duties and responsibilities of life."

"It causes sickness, impairs health and usefulness of both officers and men, adds a great burden and cost to the medical department, deprives the government of otherwise valuable officers and enlisted men and forces them to be retired at a much earlier period than they should be under proper, temperate conditions of living."

Such an indictment of intemperance, coming from an authority utterly without sentimental bias in the matter and animated only by a desire to procure efficiency in the army and naval services may well be heeded by all young men in the ranks of workers, where each man is called on to face a daily battle, in the keen competition for success.

He Had Two Kinds

"What's the trouble, John?"

"Why, sir, here's a note from Mr. Mahistick, in which he tells me that he is off on a little trip, and he wants me to send his drawing materials along."

"Well, and isn't that plain enough?"

"Hardly, sir. I don't think, sir, that you know Mr. Mahistick. I don't know whether to send his palette and brushes or only a cork screw."

—Lippincott's.

The great secret lies in keeping the liver and kidneys in health and vigor, for then the food is passed quickly along the alimentary canal, the nutritive portions being assimilated in the blood stream and the poisoned waste materials are passed out of the body.

When the liver and kidneys go wrong you will obtain relief most promptly and effectively by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If chronic indigestion is to be cured it must be by enlisting the action of these filtering and excretory organs. To persons who have thought only of the stomach as being the offending organ this may seem strange, but any competent physician will tell you this is correct.

An advertising man tells this one: "The heavy advertiser of a certain Indiana town entered the editorial office of the daily paper, and in angry and disgusted tones delivered himself as follows:

"What's the matter with this sheet, anyhow? That was a fine break you people made in my ad yesterday!"

"What seems to be the trouble?" asked the editor anxiously.

"Read it and see!" said the advertiser; and he thrust a copy of the paper into the editorial hands.

"The unhappy editor read: 'If you want to have a fit, wear Jones' shoes.'"—Lippincott's.

"I know all about that, mamma," said Freddie, "but—"

All Growing Children

are dependent on nourishment for growth. Their health as men and women is largely established in childhood.

If your child is languid, bloodless, tired when rising, without ambition or rosy cheeks, Scott's Emulsion is a wonderful help. It possesses nature's grandest body-building fats so delicately predigested that the blood absorbs its strength and carries it to every organ and tissue and fibre.

First it increases their appetite, then it adds flesh—strengthens the bones—makes them sturdy, active and healthy.

No alcohol or narcotic in Scott's Emulsion, just purity and strength.

Steam For the Soil

For some time certain growers of tomatoes, cucumbers, and similar vegetables for the London market have been injecting steam into the soil with a view to destroying certain insects and slugs. It is reported that the plan works very well for that purpose, but the operation has brought to light an unexpected fact; namely, that the soil thus treated increased greatly in fertility, so greatly, in fact, that the ordinary amount of manure cannot be used afterward.

This effect has been explained as being due to the sterilization produced by the steam, which kills the phagocytes or protozoa which in ordinary circumstances keep down the number of bacteria in the soil whose operations are beneficial in turning organic nitrogen into a form suitable for plant food.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional treatment. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; since each act of hearing causes the inflamed tube to secrete, and so the tube is kept closed, and the hearing is lost. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Dr. Carter's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

Boys and Sleep

One thing a growing boy wants to be long on is sleep, and yet he is most apt to be careless about it. It is during sleep that a boy grows most and catches up. During his waking hours he tears down and burns up more tissue than he builds good, sound and sufficient sleep is essential to growth, strength and endurance. A boy scout should have at least nine or ten hours of sleep out of every twenty-four. If you lose out on this amount on one day, make it up the next. Whenever unusually tired out or when you feel out of trim stay in bed a few hours more if it is possible. A boy should wake up each morning feeling like a fighting cock. When he doesn't he ought to get to bed earlier that night. Sleep is a wonderful restorative and tonic. It helps to store up energy and conserve strength.—"Boy Scouts of America."

It Might Have Happened Anyway

A certain minister was greatly disturbed by a number of women in his congregation who persistently gossiped it a loud tone during service. One Sunday morning he executed a plan which he had devised to stop this annoyance. At a given signal the choir stopped abruptly on a certain word in the middle of a hymn. Then one of the gossips, unable to check herself, was heard all over the church to say: "I always fry mine in lard." "As we know," announced the minister, "that she always fries hers in lard, we will proceed with the singing."

Disraeli's Splurge With Canes

Speaking of walking sticks reminds us of young Disraeli. Writing from Gibraltar, and telling his sister to inform their mother what a sensation
his waistcoats and studs were making among the officers, he added:—
"I have also the fame of being the first who ever passed the straits with two canes, a morning and an evening cane. I change my cane on the gun fire and hope to carry them both on to Cairo. It is wonderful the effect these magical wands produce. I owe to them even more attention than to being the supposed author of—what is it? I forget." The fault of many walking sticks is that they are too short.
Walk with a stick that seems at first intended for a man taller than yourself and you acquire an upright carriage. A Brighton shop that I pass occasionally is selling any number of sticks through the testimony of a well known doctor as to the health advantages of long walking sticks.—London Chronicle.

William MacDonald, a youthful Scotchman, was seriously in love, but to arrive at the point of proposing
marriage to the fair one of his choice
was too much for his sensitive soul.
Finally, after many hours of deliberation, he hit upon a plan.
It was a moonlight, starry night;
and he led the maiden of his heart to a churchyard, and, pointing to the various headstones, he said:
"Allie, my folks are buried there. Wad ye like to be buried there, too?"
—Harper's Magazine.

On a Touchy Topic
On a recent Sunday afternoon, at a large sanitarium devoted entirely to treating tuberculosis, a young Methodist minister was preaching to the assembled patients, nurses and doctors.
In a most vivid manner he was describing the great peace, contentment
and happiness to be had in the world
to come. Suddenly one of the patients, a girl of about 20 years, burst
out crying.
"What is the matter?" was the general chorus, as the rest crowded around her.
"Oh," she sobbed, "I wish he would stop talking about heaven. I am here paying $18 a week just to keep out of that place."

Cost of Colt Rearing Observations made by the bureau of statistics of the United States department of agriculture show the average cost of raising a three-year-old colt to be $104, or deducting the value of his labor during the period, a net cost of $96.50. This figure represents 71 per cent of the selling value.
The figures are the results of reports made by ten thousand correspondents—reports which showed the cost to vary widely by states, that in the east being about twice as much as
that in the west.

Of the total cost, 54 per cent. is charged to feed, 16 per cent. to care
and shelter, and 30 per cent. to miscellaneous items. Since more than all the cost of raising is chargeable to feed, it may readily be seen that the prices of feedstuffs have an important bearing upon the cost of raising a colt.
One is usually unable to secure
such complete statistics upon this subject. Too often the cost of raising farm animals is a matter shrouded
in mystery to the farmers themselves.

Smoke and Soot
Soot, the principal trouble maker in chimneys, is the product of incomplete combustion, and is formed partly by the mechanical removal of ash by the chimney draft and partly by the decomposition of the volatile portion of the fuel which is formed by the process of destructive distillation. The character of soot varies with the distance from the grate at which it has been deposited, as well as the temperature of the furnace, amount of air, and method of firing. The acids contained in soot attack mortar, masonry, woodwork, metal work and building material generally. In many European cities it has been found that soot causes the rapid disintegration of statuary and public monuments. The damage done to inside decorations appears to be no less important than the effects upon the exterior of buildings.
Smoke is visible proof of imperfect combustion of fuel, and consequently evidence of waste and inefficiency.

Clean Stomach, Clean Mind.—The
stomach is the workshop of the vital functions and when it gets out of order the whole system clogs in sympathy. The spirits flag, the mind drowns and work becomes impossible.
The first care should be to restore healthful action of the stomach and the best preparation for that purpose
is Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. General use for years has won them a leading place in medicine. A trial will attest their value.

Joint and Muscle Pains Banished by Nerviline

IT CURES RHEUMATISM

Thousands of people, chuck full of the joy of living—happy, glad, bright people, that Nerviline has cured of their pains, all tell the same wonderful story of its power to drive out the aches and tortures of rheumatism and kindred ills.
"My goodness, but Nerviline is a miracle-worker," writes Mrs. Charlotte Chipman, mother of a well-known family residing at Mount Pleasant. "Last month I was so crippled
up with sciatica and muscular rheumatism as to be almost unable to do a bit of housework. My joints were so stiff and the muscles so frightfully sore that I even cried at times with the pain. For years we have used Nerviline in our family and I just got busy with this wonderful,
good old liniment. Lots of rubbing with Nerviline soon relieved my misery and I was in a real short time
about my work as usual."

No matter where the ache is, no matter how distressing the pain you can rub it away with Nerviline. For forty years it has been curing lumbago, sciatica, backache, colds, chest
trouble, and all sorts of winter ills.

Chinese Lilies
A great deal of pleasure, at a small expense, may be got out of a few narcissus or Chinese lily bulbs, says a Washington Herald writer. These bulbs grow rapidly in water and they may be started at any time in the winter. They should be planted in a glass or china bowl, deep enough to hold sufficient water to cover them.
The bulbs are held firmly in place by filling in the spaces between them with small pebbles. The bulbs should be kept always covered with water.

Keep the Choicest Cattle
Canada's cattle herds are being depleted. It is to be hoped that the cleaning out will mean a smaller percentage of inferior animals. Unfortunately very often under such circumstances the owner is prevailed upon to part with the best. If high prices tempt, it is always advisable to start at the most inferior animals
of the lot. Do not offer the choicest,
they are worth as much on your farm as on that of another.—Farmers'

WHAT MRS. H. BEST SAYS OF
DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Alberta Woman Voices the Sentiment
of the Women of the West That Dodd's Kidney Pills are Woman's Best Friend.

Edmonton, Alta.—(Special).—"Dodd's Kidney Pills helped me wonderfully."
So says Mrs. H. Best, a highly respected lady living here. And Mrs. Best expresses the sentiment of thousands of women in Alberta. Like most women Mrs. Best does not care to talk about her troubles, but she does wish others who have suffered as she has to know that they can find relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills. "I found them entirely satisfactory. They helped me wonderfully," she says, "and I give you my full permission to tell the public what they have done for me."

Women who suffer in silence can be cured just as silently. The keystone of woman's health is the kidneys. If they are kept strong and healthy, they keep the blood pure, and pure blood
means good health all over the body.
Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys and good blood.
That's why they are known as woman's best friend.

"I guess that's so."
"Why is it?"
"Well, I figure it this way," explained the lunch-dasher. "Whenever I hang out a sign it's for something I want to get rid of."

King George on Hard Work

King George has sent an interesting little message to his subjects in Great Britain, Ireland and the colonies. "I have to work hard myself, and I think hard work is good for people,"
says the message.

Verily, hard work is good for people. As a social moralist has just told us in a book entitled "What Men Live By," work, love and play are the essentials of happiness, and work, including as it does discharge
of all duties, is the greatest of these.
It is not hard work that kills or impairs efficiency. It is either worry that does that, or else too hard, too monotonous, too mechanical work that is not properly relieved by domestic life, by wholesome recreation, by joy derived from nature, art and social intercourse.

A world without hard work would be a world of intolerable tedium and boredom. But while we cannot enjoy play and rest unless we have worked for it, it is equally true that we cannot enjoy hard work unless we return to it refreshed and stimulated by elevated pleasure, by glimpses of beauty, by satisfaction of the noblest
of our faculties. The overwhelming majority of men work hard—they have to—but too many of them, alas, have not learned to use work as a means
of happiness, have not learned to play,
to give themselves the varied interests that are the spice of life. Society should organize play as well as work,
better than I do.

Could Hardly Live For Asthma.
Writes one man who after years of suffering has found complete relief
through Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Now he knows how needless has been his suffering. This matchless remedy gives sure help to all afflicted with asthma. Inhaled as smoke or vapor it brings the help so long needed. Every dealer has it or

Shy by Names
One would suppose that even in large families parents wouldn't run out of names to give their children.
But a certain lack of imagination—or material—is evident in sections of the foreign populated west side. A United Charities worker on one of her recent investigations came across a family
where three of the young ones were named Joe. Her first thought was that either the father or mother had been married more than once, but to her amazement such did not prove to be the case. The mother simply liked the name Joe and took the path of least resistance.

"But," asked the visitor, turning to one of the little fellows, "how do you know when to come when your mamma wants you?"
"Oh, that's easy," was the reply.
"When she wants me she calls 'Joe,'
and I come, and when she wants my brother, why he comes."
This explanation is still rather unsatisfactory, but the practice of calling several children in one family by the same name, I understand, is not uncommon in Chicago.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

New Uses For Sawdust

Among the many uses for sawdust
now being found is its conversion into wood sugar. If digested with a weak solution of sulphuric acid under six or seven atmospheres pressure, sawdust is converted into sugar with a yield of about twenty-five per cent. This cannot be crystallized for commercial table use, but can be used as stock food, or fermented into alcohol.

In the California lumber camps,
where the sawdust of the red-woods has formerly been considered a positive detriment, it is now being sold to fruit growers for the packing
of choice grapes. For this purpose, it has been found as efficient as the powdered cork in which Spanish grapes are packed. By this method of packing, the fruit arrives in much better condition, and the loss from decay is greatly minimized.

A Freak in Stone

The rocky maze of Prachov, near Japan, in Northern Bohemia, is a veritable natural curiosity. It has been well described as a gigantic "freak in stone." To enter the labyrinth without a guide is a perilous proceeding,
for an unwary adventurer would probably speedily be lost in the tortuous
windings of the maze, where the paths
are so narrow and crooked and the cliffs on the side so high that the explorer soon loses all idea of locality.
In days of fiery persecution the Moravian and Bohemian brethren's secret
prayer meetings used to be held here,
just as the early Christians assembled to worship in the catacombs. The cliffs are honeycombed with cells, and at the far end of the maze is a rock
castle where in the old days a robber
baron lived and took toll of all way-farers. The shape of some of the rocks is very curious. There are, for instance, the "bishop and mifer," the "Madonna and the Child" and many others.—London Sketch.

True Hospitality
I pray you, O excellent wife, not to cumber yourself and me to get a rich dinner for this man or this woman who has alighted at our gate, nor a bedchamber made ready at too great a cost. These things, if they are curious in, they can get for a dollar at any village. But let this stranger, if he will, in your looks, in your accent
and behaviour, read your heart and earnestness; you thought and will,
which he cannot buy at any price in any village or city, and which he may well travel fifty miles and dine sparsely and sleep hard in order to behold. Certainly, let the board be spread and lie
in these things. Honor to the house where they are simple to the verge of hardship, so that there the intellect is awake and reads the laws of the universe.—Emerson.

Queen People of Papua
In the Girara country, Papua, a district of New Guinea, where the country is almost entirely submerged, the natives are said to claim descent from the dog. They possess five totems,
which are drawn on all their houses,
their villages are erected on hillocks
so as to be clear of the water, and the people of each village inhabit one large, common house, sometimes as much as 400 to 500 feet long and 60 to 80 feet in width. The centre of this huge building is a kind of common
hall, which is used only by the men,
while the walls of the structure are divided into cubicles in three or four floors, access to which is gained by means of ladders. The women are not allowed to enter the building by the same door as the men. A great deal of sorcery prevails in the western division. In the wilder parts of the country the chief is himself a head sorcerer. He claims to be able to separate his spirit from his body and
to send it on various missions, including that of killing people.

FROM BOTH SIDES

IN another column will be found a letter dealing with the Advocate's proposals for fire protection subscribed by an agent for a fire insurance company. A letter on this topic from one who is in the insurance business gives another side of the question, and shows reason for fire protection as seen from the view of the insurance companies.

The ordinary business man or property owner insures his property in order to cover himself financially, in case of loss. Not satisfied with this method alone, he goes to further trouble and institutes fire brigades and the like. The insurance company with whom he insures stands to pay in case of fire. It is to the interest of neither business men or company, that a fire should arise, and both advocate all the precautions possible. Incidentally, as the latter points out, the greater precaution, the less risk and the less the amount of premium payable. So we see that by a little extra trouble on the part of the business men of the town, they are likely to save in the question of premiums. The protection safeguards the town and instils business confidence into others. By good fire protection there is more to save and reap than appears at first sight. It is worth while to try it in Vulcan.

THE BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

SOME little agitation has been commenced by the churches for having the Bible taught in the public schools, an agitation not altogether new, but nevertheless interesting. Naturally, one would conclude that in a Christian country it would be the natural thing, but the question with it is where to begin and where to leave off. The suggestion that there should be a certain day for the teaching of it, and that such teaching should be given by ministers of the gospel is hardly practical in a country such as this, on account of the large areas covered by only one minister, apart from the fact that the suggestion opens up the old quarrelling ground of creed.

As far as experience has shown us we are of the opinion that creed is an absolutely unnecessary quantity when one starts to teach children the Bible. For a child there is no creed, inasmuch as such has been the bone of contention between men from time immemorial. The necessary teaching for a child are the essentials of faith, when it is older it may entangle itself in any particular creed which it likes. But the question of creeds in schools has been a stumbling block in the way of rational education for long enough, and in a young country such as this it is ought to be possible to devise some means whereby the coming generation may receive some biblical training free from the meshes of any particular belief.

UNCONSCIOUS CRUELTY

NOW that the spring is here with the warmer days the gophers are in strong evidence. Naturally, perhaps, the little fellows want to be out of doors with the inevitable snare to see what they can do in the gopher catching business. Hereditary instinct perhaps, to be traced back further than the majority of us can remember, but whatever it is the majority of the grown-ups are inclined to smile at these youthful exploits and let it go at that. But when the youngsters get among the gophers they are liable to render the life of their victim unbearable by treatment which is perhaps never given a moment's thought, but it is nothing more or less than cruelty. A gopher may be a pest and better out of the way, but there is everything to be said for making the dispatch as quickly as possible, and nothing to be said for its being kept in captivity while its life leaks out by the minute.

A question such as this needs careful consideration by every parent. The child ought not to be allowed to cultivate cruelty in an unconscious manner and then grow up to find that cruelty is part of its nature; the blame will be as greatly on the parent as though it is the child who will suffer. No child means harm, it is merely playing, but morally it is playing with fire, and the sooner it is impressed with a sense of proportion in these matters the better.

A GENERAL CLEAN-UP

THE city of Calgary is seizing the bull by the horns in organizing a regular inclusive clean-up. For the management of the same, committees have been formed for each day of the week, commencing May 4th. Monday is to be devoted to cleaning out all accumulations of rubbish from garrets, Tuesday for the cleaning of back yards, Wednesday will be front yard day, Thursday painting day, Friday being Arbor Day, will be devoted to the eradication of noxious weeds and the setting out of suitable plants, while Saturday is the day that the children help picking up the sticks and other unsightly things on the vacant lots.

For a program such as this the city of Calgary deserves to receive the thanks of every town and village throughout Alberta, for it is so adaptable to the need of every place. It shows a decided effort to cope with the accumulated rubbish of years, put everything in ship-shape order, and then add beauty to the city by encouraging the planting out of suitable flowers and shrubs. We imagine that such a plan as this would be very applicable to our town at present. The council are doing what they can in the matter of cleaning up the town generally, but there are lots of ways in which the ordinary person can help the council to effect a really good clean-up.

WANTED, A DENTIST

IN our last week's issue there appeared a small paragraph about the need of a dentist for Vulcan. That little paragraph has come to the notice of more than one of our citizens and they are entirely in concurrence with the opinion that a dentist is needed here. In fact, some of them have requested the Advocate to enlarge upon the subject in this issue, setting forth the probabilities of the district.

Unfortunately, space will not allow us to do this, but to anyone who desires information we shall be glad to write privately, giving them the fullest details of the district they will cover, renting of office, house and other particulars incidental to commencing business.

The numerous comments which we have received since we published the paragraph, and all of them favorable, show unmistakably that almost everyone is of the same opinion.

There is plenty of room for a dentist and if he settled here he would have no cause to regret his decision.

THE MEXICAN AFFAIR

DURING the past week the Mexican situation has developed into a matter of far wider interest than one expected. The United States has been drawn into the affair, warships have been sent to the scene of activity, and a warlike atmosphere is over everything.

The general speculation is as to how long the trouble will last, and on this point it is the advantage of everyone to offer theories. No one will be surprised that the two armies of Mexico should combine against a common foe. In the majority of cases, the opinion is that the United States will find that they are engaging with a fairly stubborn foe, such as the British forces met in South Africa. Ordinarily, this would be so, and it may be so in this case if the Mexicans can get hold of the money. At present they are fairly well out of the necessary finances, owing to the drainage caused by their family quarrel, and unless they can recuperate themselves in this respect, there is every possibility of their having to curtail the war as far as their own inclinations are concerned. Again, the sense of nationality is not very great in Mexico, as any one will admit who has followed the civil war and noticed how easily the officers would take to their heels in many cases, leaving their men to the mercy of the opponents. These circumstances are bound to tell in the present circumstances, and although there may be a guerilla condition in Mexico afterwards, the actual conflict now will not last as long as some people imagine.

The Pacific Mail steamship Siberia which it was feared had been lost last week arrived at Manila on Friday May 1st. The captain reports that the vessel had an uneventful voyage from Nagasaki to Manila.

The Canadian Outlook

The March issue of the "Emigration Gazette," the official organ of the Salvation Army Emigration department in England, contains much interesting information regarding that important branch of the army dealing with "The Canadian Outlook." Commissioner David C. Limb remarks:

"Within the last half year I have been twice to Canada, besides making a tour through Australia and New Zealand. I returned home from my last journey more convinced than ever of the value of our department to men and women contemplating emigration, because of the practical advice and guidance it can give them from its accumulated store of experience, and also of the substantial benefit its efficient and up-to-date organization can be to actual emigrants while traveling by sea or land and during the initial stages of their settlement, when a help of a friendly hand is needed most. The methods of our department, both on this side of the Atlantic and in Canada, have been built up from our experience of our needs of the settler and the requirements of the country. They have been tested and proved. And it can be said of our officers that their work is entirely disinterested."

"During the past few years I have studied Canada and Canadian conditions closely, visiting the country frequently in connection with the work of our department and therefore can claim to have some intimacy with the state of affairs in that country. From the observations I was able to make and the information I obtained from reliable sources, I am confident that there is no need for anyone to be apprehensive as to the future of Canada. Last year's harvest was a bountiful one, and the call for increased agricultural activity has never been more pronounced. As a natural result of the multiplication of the population there is an emphatic need for a greater food supply, and the demand for the products of mixed farming is becoming more and more clamorous, creating a wide field of opportunity for agriculturalists with ideas. Therefore the prospects for the workers of the land is very bright. Already we have many applications from Canadian sources for agricultural workers for March and April at good wages. There are also many excellent openings for women for domestic service; indeed the demand for their service might be said to be unlimited."

"We have constantly raised our voice against the rush to the cities where the cost of living has been rising steadily a circumstance which works out to the advantage of the man who settles on the land."

Walks Out of Caucus

R. B. Bennett, of Calgary, and W. F. Nickle, of Kingston, walked out of the Conservative caucus held on Tuesday, April 28, called to consider the C. N. R. proposals. Later they were followed by J. H. Burnham, of Peterboro. Mrs. Nickle and Bennett gave out the following joint statements:

"After listening to the proposals we came from the caucus because in our opinion they were proposals in the interests of railway promoters, and not for the people."

Both men admitted the proposals were not satisfactory to them, and declared that they would vote and speak in the House against the legislation. Neither of the two members spoke at the caucus. It is possible that as a result of the gathering the agreement may be modified so as to meet the views of the dissenters, but if the proposals come before parliament in the form of a bill as outlined by the premier opposition may be looked for from this group of members.

Gardens and Chickens

At this season of the year nearly everybody thinks of gardening, asking themselves what they shall grow and the best kind of flowers to plant in order to make their home look attractive. All this planning and making of the garden naturally entails a large amount of mental and manual work, and it is with a feeling of pride when, after a few weeks, the result of your efforts begin to show aboveground, and you behold the beautiful transformation.

But there is also another very profitable business which engages the attention of many people at this time of the year, and that is chicken raising, which is perfectly in order if conducted in a proper manner. The person who is raising chickens or keeps chickens at all should see that they do no damage to their neighbor's garden, by fencing them in a place to themselves instead of having them run at large. What is more exasperating than to see a dozen of your neighbor's chickens scratching up a newly planted garden. Gardens and chickens will not grow together—the one destroys the other—and for this reason the person who prefers chickens to a garden should do all in his power to prevent them doing damage to his neighbor's gardens.

Now man goes forth and makes his garden, a hard and painful grind; and then the crime beyond all pardon destroys his peace of mind. His neighbor keeps a string of chickens, and they, inflamed with greed, come over and scratch to beat the dickens, and dig up all the seed. And then the man whose wasted labor has set him seeing red, walks over to see that heinous neighbor and manures his head. Thus village feuds are often started, and people raise the fence, and men and dams are broken hearted because some hens ran loose. In any town where leggy chickens run loose, in scorn of law, you may be sure that trouble thickens, and bears are sore and raw. Old hens and roosters have created more trouble, caused more tears, that could in seven weeks be stated by seven auctioneers. If you must keep a herd of Dorkings or other brand of fowls, oh, take them where their frantic workings won't stir up griefs and howls. To some lone wilderness escort them, some desert far away; there you may coddle them and sort them, and watch the blame fools lay.—Walt Mason.

Juvenile Court

Juvenile courts are being established all over the province and a proclamation has been issued by the government bringing the act respecting juvenile delinquents into force in Alberta, Saturday, April 25th. The legislature of Alberta, having passed an act providing for the establishment of juvenile courts, a proclamation bringing the Dominion act into force was necessary. Thirty-five new court judges have been named by the provincial government, and among them is Mrs. R. R. Jamieson, of Calgary. It is believed that these judges or magistrates will have higher powers or greater jurisdiction than juvenile court commissioners have hitherto had. As a result of the provincial act having been passed, it is necessary to bring the Dominion act into force.

Rev. A. D. McDonald, of the Children's Aid society, informed The News-Telegram that the Dominion Protection act was passed on July 20th, 1908. The majority of the cases brought up in the juvenile court, here, are laid under the Protection act of Alberta, when the point of age is to be decided, the age limit in this act being 16. The Dominion Protection act which has been brought into force in this province, places the age limit at 17. Cases can, therefore, be brought under either act.—Telegram.

Champion Items

The question debated at the last meeting of the Literary society was "Resolved, that married life is more to be desired than single life." The negative won by two points. At the close of the debate it was decided to discontinue the meetings until the fall, as spring and summer work made it difficult to continue and hold up the support.

The Adams Bros. Meat Market has undergone some decided improvements. It has been repainted and cleaned throughout.

Master Freddie Smith had a runaway on Thursday last while driving home from school. No serious damage was done however. The shafts were both broken, and the youngster badly frightened.

Champion feels very proud of the new orchestra which has lately held its first practice. As yet all the pieces have not arrived, but when it is properly organized there will be about ten pieces.

Mr. Vernon Lloyd and family, who have been in Ill. U.S.A., have returned and expect to take up a farm near Vulcan.

Con. Petro, of the R. N. W. M. P. stationed at Vulcan, was in Champion for the better part of last week, there being many cases for trial. One was the case of Mr. Fertig's pasture having been burnt. The person who was the cause of the conflagration was fined $30.

Miss Mollie McLeod met with a sad misfortune on Wednesday evening last. While driving home the cows from an open section her horse threw her, breaking Miss McLeod's limb above the knee. She lay most of the night until she was found by her brothers who had gone to see what had become of her. Some ten hours elapsed between the time of the break until it was set. Miss McLeod had been attending school here, and is well known. It is the hope of her many friends that the injuries are not serious.

To Encourage Dairying

The Alberta Department of Agriculture have decided to conduct dairy contests during the spring and summer, with a view to stimulating interest in this very essential part of the farm. It has been shown time after time that the majority of farmers are not aware of the actual merits of individual cows, and this point is to be enlarged upon by urging the farmers to weigh the milk at each milking. This can be done with very little trouble if the chart and scales are kept in the stable.

In this connection the department undertakes to supply the scales, and every competitor complying with the rules of the competition will be allowed to keep the scales when the competition is through. There are four competitions, three open to grade cows only and one open to purebred cattle. Three of the contests are being conducted with the three agricultural schools at Claresholm, Vermillion and Olds as centres. The competitions are open to all students at the schools and to the farmers within a radius of twenty miles. Prizes are being offered in cattle from purebred stock. A special prize awaits the girl who makes the highest scoring in the competition. The contests are being organized under the supervision of Sydney Carlyle, instructor in dairy cattle in management in the department of agriculture.

The volcanoes Vesuvius and Etna are causing much anxiety. The rumblings of Vesuvius are now continuous, and are accompanied by earth rumblings, the emitting of cinders and an enormous mass of lava. Professor Maladra, director of the Vesuvius observatory, says the phenomena are exactly similar to those preceding the great eruption of 1906.

Loma News

The football team is under organization at present, and is to be under the presidency of Neil Beaton. The club will commence playing on Saturdays as soon as ever the seeding is completed, and will have a regular club uniform.

We are glad to report that Mr Leeman McFarland, who was run over while drilling recently, is making rapid progress towards recovery. He is already able to be about at his usual work.

The Loma post office is now closed, with the result that the mail situation is one of confusion. Approaches, however, are being made towards the establishment of a free rural delivery, and there are good prospects of success. Meanwhile the Loma people have to come to Loma for their mail.

The high school girls have returned to High River, and they will be missed from the community meanwhile.

Peter Enzenaur has had a well drilled by Mr. Journey, and has got an abundance of water at 152 feet. The water rises to within 20 feet of the surface.

Mr. Donald Beaton went up to Calgary with a car load of fat steers recently, for which he received top prices.

The house of Mr William McDonald is rapidly nearing completion. When finished it will be a model of convenience and comfort. It looks prosperous, as if the owner had come to the district to stay.

Seeding in the Loma district is practically completed now, and the prospects are all that could be desired. The seed is mostly oats. Grain in fallow is already sprouting.

Mr. I. Terborgh sold 19 fat hogs to Mr. John Gardner, of Vulcan, last week.

James Ward shipped a carload of high grade cattle to Calgary during last week, and obtained top prices.

The Loma district is sorry to lose Mr. Grieve Elliot, the late post master and storekeeper, who removes to the Okanagan lake district, B.C., the beginning of this month. He will be very much missed. Mr Elliot is going on the same quarter section as Mr. Gorman, late of Loma, whom it will be remembered, relieved the Loma district of the best school mistress they ever had.

Mr. Charles Clark, a student from the Vancouver Presbyterian Theological College, has arrived in Loma to supply the Loma and Eosign charges. His first sermon created a splendid impression, and he is bound to do much good work and make many friends.

Mr Peter Enzenaur is experimenting in his seeding this season, by cross drilling his oats in summer fallow. By doing this he hopes to prevent the crop from lodging before harvest. The district is very much interested in the idea, and if it is successful it will be adopted throughout the district.

Many Prehistoric Remains

During dredging operations in the weir stream at Marlow, England, a piece of bone, two horns, and a portion of an antler were raised from the peaty soil about two-feet below the river bed. The bone and horns belong to an extinct prehistoric animal, and the antler to an animal which, it is stated, lived about 10,000 years ago.

Once there was a hypochondriac who used to think that he was dying about three times a week. One day he was driving out in his automobile, and one of these spells came over him. On the road ahead of him he happened to see his family doctor speeding along in his roadster. He felt so sick that he applied all his power in order to catch up with the doctor as soon as possible.

But the doctor saw him coming, and he used all the gas he had to get away from him. For about three miles they had a close race. Finally, however, the doctor had some tire trouble, and the hypochondriac drew up alongside.

"Doctor," she shouted, "stop a minute! I am dying. Darn it all! I'm dying!"

"You must be," grunted the physician. "I never saw anybody going so fast as you are."

Uncorker of Ocean Bottles

It is not many years since the high sounding post of uncorker of ocean bottles travelled slowly in Queen Elizabeth's time, and the first news she had of the taking of Nova Zembla by the Dutch was found in a bottle picked up by a Dutch fisherman named Donfield, who forwarded the message to the lord high admiral. Queen Elizabeth was struck by the idea and decreed that all bottles with inclosures found on the coast should be forwarded to the lord high admiral. Tonfield being appointed uncorker. The post survived for centuries.

Mr. Harper was very much better, so Mr. Harper allowed the nurse an evening off. As she herself was to keep a very important engagement, she told Bridget to watch the sick woman and gave her several orders which she impressed upon the Irish girl's mind, were very important. Returning later than she intended, she heard Mr. Harper moving restlessly and, after quieting him, she sought Bridget for information.

"I wonder what makes Mr. Harper so restless. He was sleeping very soundly when I went out. Do you know, Bridget?"

"No, mum," said the conscientious girl, "unless I disturbed his mind when I woke him up to give him his sheepin' powder."

"Fred, do you remember where you were in 1910?" asked the bride of a few months.

"Why, no, dear, I don't remember exactly," replied the young husband. "Why do you ask?"

"Why, I was reading today in the paper that it is said that in 1910 one person in every 500 in the United States was in prison."

Sugar Kills Microbes

Galen, the "father of the medical art," attached great importance to the antiseptic properties of sugar, but his discovery has been hitherto ignored by doctors and surgeons. German doctor has just published a treatise demonstrating the extraordinary antiseptic properties of pure cane sugar in the treatment of wounds, thus giving additional proof of the old adage that there is nothing new under the sun.

As a result of a number of experiments it is conclusively proved that a solution of sugar is one of the best disinfectants and sterilizers that can be found. The German doctor employed it successfully in a number of very grave cases. Its use was entirely successful and prevented putrefaction of wounds and contamination by microbes more efficaciously than any other medical antiseptic.

The use of sugar as a preservative of liquids, especially of milk, is common enough but very few people were aware of the fact that it is a powerful microbe-killer.

Won Fame on Its Merits

The unbounded popularity that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil enjoys is not attributable to any elaborate advertising, for it has not been so advertised, but is entirely due to the merits of this Oil as a medicine. In every city, town and hamlet in the country it is sought after solely because of its good qualities.

A small boy had been given a penny with a hole in it. Handing it to a still smaller companion, he said: "Jimmie, I dare you to go into that store and buy something with this penny."

Jimmie was quite willing. Entering boldly, he said: "I want a doughnut." And, taking it, he hastily presented the penny.

"Here," said the clerk, "this penny has a hole in it."

"So has the doughnut," announced Jimmie, triumphantly, holding it up.—The Delineator.

The marine barracks at Washington were visited on one occasion by a party of young girls from a Delaware town, friends of the officers of the barracks. The party exhibited much interest in everything pertaining to the life and discipline of the post.

"What do you mean by 'taps'?" queried one of the young women.

"Taps is played every night on the bugle," answered the officer addressed. "It means 'lights out.' They play it over the bodies of dead soldiers."

A puzzled look overspread the questioner's pretty face. Then, she asked: "What do you do if you haven't a dead soldier?"—Harper's Magazine.

Jackal Flies of India

There are certain East Indian flies, several varieties of them apparently of similar type to our own house fly. Musca domestica, that have developed a rather ingenious, if somewhat disreputable, way of making a living. This is the story told by Captain Patton and Craig in the Indian Journal of Medical Research. The proboscis of these flies is soft and not suitable for piercing the skin of man or the lower animals. So they hang around some one of the several types of biting flies, and when the latter pierces the skin of the victim they crowd him away and use the incision for feeding themselves. If the biter happens to be too large or fierce then to be driven from his prey, the fly jacks at him, he is finished and then takes his place. In view of these observations it seems quite possible that the so-called non-biting flies may play a hitherto unsuspected role in the transmission of disease.

Before the passage of the present strict banking laws in Wisconsin, starting a bank was a comparatively simple proposition. The surprisingly small amount of capital needed is well illustrated by the story a prosperous country town banker told on himself, when asked how he happened to enter the banking business:

"Well," he said, "I didn't have much else to do, so I rented an empty store building and painted bank on the window. The first day I was open for business a man came in and deposited a hundred dollars with me; the second day another man dropped in and deposited two hundred and fifty dollars; and so, by George, along about the third day I got confidence enough in the bank to put in a hundred myself."

The Indiscriminate Phrase "What's this?" exclaimed the sensational editor.

"Story about a woman who put a few people to considerable trouble," said the reporter.

"But you haven't identified her." "We couldn't learn her name."

"What difference does that make? Not knowing her name would not prevent you from referring to her as a prominent society woman, would it?"—Spokane Review.

"And you say you never attend weddings any more?" asked the sweet young thing.

"No, I do not," replied the bachelor.

"And why not, pray?"

"Why, don't you see what's happening every day to innocent bystanders?"—Yonkers Stateman.

Arithmetic Justice

Rough and ready justice in Mexico in the days of President Diaz is illustrated by the following story:

In a lonely part of the south a train had been robbed by the inhabitants of a certain village. The president told a young officer to take his company and "put an end to that sort of thing."

The young officer had every house searched. Almost all contained stolen property. He then marshaled the villagers, picked out every fortieth man and had him shot. After this he said: "I am taking my troops away, but if any more train robberies take place we shall come back and shoot every twentieth man. Should it be necessary to return again, every tenth man will be executed."

No more trains were attacked.

A trained ostrich recently disconcerted its exhibitor at a London music hall by continually endeavoring to break away from all restraint and to climb over the footlights into the orchestra.

The widely advertised act came to a sudden end, and the professor emerged from behind the curtain and apologized for the actions of his pet in about these words:

"Ladies and gentlemen: 'Hi am very sorry to disappoint you this evening. We're compelled to cease our engagement until the management engages a new orchestra leader."

"The one at present employed 'as no 'air on top of 'is 'ead, and my bird takes hit for a hegg."

Two on A Tour

In Which the Conventionalities Were Rudely Ignored.

By TROY ALLISON.

The elevator of the Washington monument reached the ground after its solemn slow descent, and Rhoda Jamison, feeling somewhat overawed by the world as seen from the top of the monument, sat down on a bench near the elevator door. She needed a few minutes to readjust her thoughts and to plan for the rest of the day.

Rhoda had saved every possible penny from her salary during the school term in order to take this Washington trip and had determined to crowd as much sightseeing into her ten days as any other Washington tourist had ever done.

She had spent hours with the visiting milliner in her town planning every detail of the time and had finally arrived in the city and taken a cab directly to the quiet lodgings she had recommended. The milliner had, however, forgotten to take into consideration the fact that the girl had never been accustomed to a city and to city ways and had therefore failed to prepare her for the feeling of desolation and loneliness that grew more and more oppressive every minute.

The Congressional library had satisfied her love of beauty, the capitol and the White House had seemed like old friends from the pictures in the geography and history from which she had taught for months, but in her classes she had been the personality. Here she seemed to dwindle into nothingness, and the things that had been mere ideas and pictures towered over her oppressively, and she was overcome by her littleness and her loneliness and longed for some one to speak to her with a hint of friendly interest.

The big, broad shouldered man sitting on the other end of the bench she had seen walking down the steps of the monument. He had evidently felt so secure in his superb physical strength that he walked down to examine more closely the inscriptions on the stones that cannot be studied so well from the elevator.

She saw him take a fountain pen from his pocket, adjust it and finally sort a package of souvenir post cards and begin writing industriously.

She remembered the package she had bought to send her pupils, so she took her own pen from her hand bag and commenced racking her brain for little things to write that would amuse them.

The postal she liked best of all, a faintly colored view of the monument itself, she addressed to her mother. Across it she wrote, "It's so very big, and I feel so little and so lonely."

She leaped forward to flit a bit of dust from the tip of her pen, and a whiff of air blew the postal from her lap and left it lying at the big man's feet.

He saw it there and, thinking he had dropped one of his own, stooped and picked it up, reading it leisurely.

"I feel so little and so lonely," he read, and, surprised, turned to meet the flushed face of the girl.

"It's mine," she said, holding out her hand for it.

"Do you feel that way, too?" he asked eagerly. "That's me exactly."

"I shouldn't have called you really 'little,'" she answered, with the frank friendliness of a girl who had never met with a circumstance that would cause her to be suspicious of humanity.

"I reckon you are referring to the first part of the sentence. 'It is so big' would really seem more suitable."

"That's right," he laughed, looking at the postal, "but that just proves that I can hold more loneliness than you, for I am feeling lonely from the soles of my feet to the top of my new felt hat that I bought in Carson City to see the sights of Washington."

"At least you are farther from home than I. I'm from South Carolina," she chatted, three days' absence from conversation having left her with a surplus on hand.

"I was just sending some of these things to the boys," he said. "They are living in a shack near mine, and I will tickle 'em immensely to get these pictures of civilization. You see, we had been out there for two years digging away for gold without any success, and just as we'd fallen into a fit of gloom and shortage of grub why we struck it rich."

"How lovely! Did you find it in chunks?" Her eyes sparkled like a child's.

"That's about the size of it," he laughed, with a whole souled heartiness he hadn't experienced for days.

"We sure found it in large sized pieces, and I just thought I'd take a vacation to see the world. I've never been east before."

"Do you like it?" She failed to put as much doubt as to the charms of Washington in her tone as she might have put half an hour earlier.

"I've been about the loveliest person the dome ever shadowed. I could get on very well in the daytime, but I've wanted to sit around the fire at night and talk it over with the boys. How long are you going to stay?" he asked eagerly.

"Ten days. I've been here three! His face lengthened visibly.

"I'll be here a whole month," he added dolefully. "Why don't you stay longer?"

"You see, I haven't struck it rich—"

huge chunks. The trustees of my school are rather a parsimonious lot."

"I don't know much about eastern etiquette, but I wonder if it wouldn't be tolerably proper for us to do some sightseeing together this afternoon?" he said, with a touch of boyish shyness.

"I wonder," she said slowly.

The joy of companionship settled the question for them, and he called at her boarding house morning after morning, guidebook in hand, the plan for the day already laid out.

They had left the trip to Arlington for the last afternoon of her stay, and they wandered through the grounds, more beautiful than ever in their early summer foliage, until they reached the spot overlooking the Potomac where the tall shaft rises in honor of the heroes of the Spanish war.

"This is the loveliest spot of all," he said as they sat down on the grassy slope with their faces turned toward the river. "Washington will seem dead after I put you on the train this afternoon. Have you enjoyed this week, little woman?" a slight nervousness in his voice.

"It has been—perfect," she said softly. "After I had you to talk to the crowds didn't seem unfriendly at all. They changed into a set of good natured passersby."

"I—er—haven't seemed to miss the boys much lately, either," he said absently, watching her slender fingers arrange the largest daisies and clover leaves that she found near her, "but I'll go to missing them again the very minute our train pulls out this afternoon."

He sat up straight suddenly and looked at her almost sternly.

"Do you think a man ought to be forgiven for telling a lie?" he demanded abruptly.

Her face paled slightly, and her eyes were large with a fear that he might in some way confess himself unworthy of the friendly confidence she had placed in him. The unconventionality of their acquaintance stood out in her mind suddenly as viewed from the world's standpoint.

"You haven't lied to me?" she asked faintly.

"Absolutely! No one ever told a bigger one," he said, with his eyes fixed on the clover leaves, failing to see her pallor, "for it will not be the boys I'll be missing; it will be—just you."

Her color came back with a rush, and she avoided his eyes as she rose hastily to her feet, the daisies and clover leaves falling to the ground.

"I'm sure I will be late for my train if we don't hurry back," she said abruptly.

"I almost wish you would miss it—it seems a shame that you cannot afford to stay longer when I have more money than I can possibly spend—unless the town will let me build 'em another library. You couldn't let me—er—" he stammered, not knowing how to express himself.

"No, I couldn't," she blazed, catching his half formed idea.

"There—there—little woman—don't get huffy. I suppose I do bump up against conventionalities occasionally, but somehow I hate for you not to have everything you want," he blurted out.

Her eyes softened, and when they reached the station she watched his broad shoulders as he elbowed his way through the crowd at the ticket office and wondered why, now her face was turned homeward, she should feel more homesick than ever.

When he had put her on the train he leaned over and spoke determinedly.

"I'm coming to South Carolina before I go back west."

She didn't answer, and he took from his coat pocket one of the clover leaves she had dropped on the ground at Arlington and held it up before her. She saw it had four leaves.

"Do you know what I am going to wish? That when I go back west—you'll go with me!" he waited, a big, awkward boy in his embarrassment, for her to look at him.

"I—I—the train is starting," she said, holding out her hand hastily, "but if one finds a four leaf clover—he is supposed to get his wish."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Baby's Outing.

Frequently a baby is seen on the street in a coach out for "an airing," and the little face is all bundled up with the covers or a heavy veil bound around its face and head. That child is getting little or no fresh air. It is breathing between its face and the covering and taking in and out of the lungs the same air. This air would be found just as stuffy as in a closed room.

The mother wrongly believes that she is keeping the child from catching cold by keeping the cold air away from the face. It is perfectly proper to keep the entire body in winter well covered to prevent chilling, but decidedly wrong to cover the face. If it is so cold and blustering out that one fears the child's face will be frostbitten, then it is better policy to keep the child in a well ventilated room.

The same thing applies to adults. What is the use of opening wide the windows if you bury your head in a lot of soft pillows and cover your face with the blankets? No one would consider sleeping out of doors with a sleeping bag on and a bag to cover the head and face.

FORGOT AMERICA'S SIZE.

A Stupid Oversight on the Part of His Lordship.

An English peer, noted for his wealth and his peppery temper, who is president of a large British corporation, with American headquarters in New York, arrived in San Francisco recently from the orient. It was his first American visit.

On the day of his arrival, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, he sent an urgent telegram to his company's New York manager at the latter's office. The message called for an immediate answer.

Receiving no reply by 4:30 o'clock, the peer sent another message expressing his exasperation at not having had a reply sooner. Another hour went and still no answer. Thereupon a thoroughly angry nobleman wired a third time. It was a characteristic peevish message. No answer.

Early the next morning the peer got his reply. It was just a crisp business wire, giving the information he wished. There was no explanation as to the delay.

When the Englishman reached New York he went to the manager's office with fire in his eye.

"Why didn't you answer those telegrams of mine promptly?" he demanded.

"Do you mean to say you stop business here at 3 o'clock in the afternoon?"

And then he got five minutes' relief by storming around the office, threatening all kinds of disaster to the entire force. He had been nursing the grievance all the way across the continent.

When the peer subsided the manager remarked quietly:

"When you sent your first message it was 6 o'clock in New York and when you sent your last it was 8:30."

The Englishman stared. Then he showed he wasn't such a bad fellow.

"By Jove!" he cried. "How stupid of me! What a bally ass I am! I forgot the size of your country."—New York Times.

TO REPLACE "HUSKIES."

Everybody in Far North Watching Experiments With Reindeers.

At the lone Hudson Bay Company post at Cartwright there is a little youngster, Stuart Swaffie, by name, son of the "factor," or company agent at the post, whose story gives the reason, in a nutshell, why the reindeer were brought to Labrador.

When Stuart was a child, five or six years of age, his mother sent him out to play while she attended to her household duties. By and by she heard a great commotion among the Eskimo dogs, of whom the post maintains quite a pack for drawing the sledges in the winter time. At first she thought nothing of it, for the dogs often fight among themselves. Wilder and wilder, however, grew the snarls and yelps (for the Eskimo dog, being really a wolf and not a dog, does not bark) until curiosity got the better of her and she went to the window to see the cause.

To her consternation, the entire pack of dogs had set upon the child, who had perhaps stumbled up among them in his play, while her own dog, "Bouncer," brought from the home-land, was alone attempting to defend him. It was with the utmost difficulty that the pack was at last driven off, and when the child was rescued the clothes fairly clung to the skin, so numerous were his wounds. He could only whisper: "The dogs bit me," and then fainted away.

In a lone cemetery out on the wind-swept cape at Rigolet there is a monument to two trappers, father and son. The two had come in to trade their pelts and left the post in high spirits. That was the last that was seen of them. Later in the spring the dogs were found gnawing their bones on the beaches.

The very first piece of advice a native of Labrador will give you, is not to pet the dogs, and, above all, not to stumble or fall among them; for at that instant the pack will fall upon you.

In the summer the dogs forage for themselves, feeding largely on the fish that come close in to shore or on the offal of the fishing settlements. They are great, beautiful creatures, snowy white or mottled slightly with brown. In winter, however, their voracious appetites know no bounds. At the post food is cooked for them and served hot, but it seems this never suffices.

Harnessed up and driven along the snow trails of the northern wilds, it is only fear of the driver's whip that keeps them down. Let one dog turn upon him and he shoots to kill; otherwise the pack is on him at once. Many, indeed, are the men in the lone wilderness of the north-land who have been devoured by their dogs.

Hence the need of bringing in the reindeer to take the place of the dogs.

Dr. Grenfell, however, has one difficulty to meet in trying to replace the dogs with the deer, for the people are used to the dogs and claim to know just how to handle them, while they do not know how to use the reindeer.

Moreover, no reindeer can be put into use in a settlement until all the dogs thereabout are gone, for the dogs will smell a deer miles away and the pack will "go" for it at once. What, then, can the people do between the time the deer are brought in and are being broken to use and the necessary killing or sending away of the dogs?

What, too, shall be done with the dogs? At present, when a dog bites anyone he is shot; the skin is dressed and sold for about $3. But many of the dogs are gentle, some are thoroughly tame and reliable and the people are loath to part with them. Only a stern law can make them do this—and to get such a law passed and enforced needs influence and determination.

One wonders what the post would seem like when, instead of the beautiful dogs coming down the path to the dock, stopping to throw out their forefeet and lean out to yawn, or lick one's shoe, running as soon as one lifts a hand for fear of the probable stone, the reindeer will browse in the corrals.

Reindeer moss abounds in Labrador and on it the deer feed, even through the snow. Up at St. Anthony's, where Dr. Grenfell's station has a hospital, the 300 deer that he has brought there are now flourishing. It is there the important experiment will be tried of substituting the deer for the dog. The world awaits the result with interest.

New Brunswick Judge.

The Hon. Ward Chipman Hazen Grimmer, who has been appointed a Judge of the Appeal Division of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, and also named as a judge of the Chancery Division of the same court, is one of the best known men of New Brunswick, having been for some years mayor of St. Stephen, one of the principal cities of the province—down by the sea. For ten years also, he was a member of the Provincial Legislature, and for several years a member of the Provincial Government. He is a close personal friend of the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Hon. Mr. Hazen, who considers him one of the most straightforward men and most capable lawyers in Canada. The new judge is 56 years of age, and is a native of St. Stephen.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

1,300 Miles of New Road.

A new record in the establishment of colonization roads for the province has been set in the improvement and construction in the last year of 1,300 miles. The sum expended in this manner, under the supervision of Superintendent G. W. Bennett, exceeds $400,000, and the efficiency of the highways placed in the north are also considered by the department to have left old standards behind. In some cases the Government bore the whole cost and in others the localities shared by bylaw.

PHOTOGRAPHIC JUDGES.

A Lesson That Was Learned at the Last Olympic Games.

Photography failed as a means of deciding winners in the races and other contests at the last Olympic games in Stockholm. But because of that lesson stereoscopic photographs are proposed as an improvement and are to be tried out in England. At the Stockholm games photographs were taken of the runners as they reached the tape, but in every instance where the judges differed among themselves as to who was the winner the additional evidence of the camera was not sufficient to bring about an agreement. The only instances where the photographs were assumed to be decisive were those in which the judges agreed with the photographic record anyway.

The trouble was apparently due to lack of stereoscopic effect. So it is now suggested that the pictures be taken by a stereoscopic camera. In other words, two pictures are taken together from cameras side by side, so that when the developed prints are put in a stereoscope—like the one which used to be found always on the center table in the parlor—there will be depth to the picture, and in consequence it will be possible to determine beyond dispute the exact position of each runner.

An advisory trainer of the British athletes who competed at Stockholm and who has trained many Cambridge university athletes uses high speed photography regularly in his training work. Many photographs of runners and jumpers are taken, each exposure being a high speed snapshot. Then the photographs are examined to see in what way the runner or jumper can improve his style.

It may be found, for instance, that he has acquired a habit of making some motions with his arms that use up little of his strength, yet slightly hinder instead of help his main effort. Motion pictures did not prove of value in these studies owing to the fact that the ordinary motion picture camera is not equipped with a high speed shutter.

SLEEP IS AN ILLUSION.

It Is Not Yourself, but Your Invisible Double That Demands It.

You may probably believe that you need a night's sleep, if not regularly, at least now and then. But Gabriel d'Annunzio, the Italian poet, a believer in the occult and a student of psychical phenomena, thinks otherwise.

After many months of investigation, during which he has attended with leading scientists of the day numerous seances, at which the services of the best known mediums were invoked, d'Annunzio has arrived at the conclusion that man does not live an undivided individual life. Always by his side, he insists, is his double, magic being, working for him and prompting all his actions.

"Man himself," the poet asserts, "does not require sleep, which is only an illusion. It is his invisible prompter that tires of performing for him those everyday actions which man attributes to his own personality."

"When man's mysterious partner requires rest all he does is to remove from the mundane body something essential to man's wakefulness, whereupon sleep supervenes."

"The process is like that of the mechanic who, wishing to damage a piece of machinery, removes an essential part. Exactly what man's magic aid removes in order to send him to sleep I do not know, but I am convinced we shall discover in time."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Might of a Maine Man in Persia.

Colonel John N. Merrill, on whom the shah of Persia has conferred the decoration of the Order of the Lion, the highest ranking order given by the Persian government, is an American, a native of Maine. He went to Persia several years ago and finally became a commander of the gendarmes. Recently he left that arm of the service, having signed a contract for three years, and was given an independent command of infantry and cavalry. The object being to make southern Persia uninhabitable for the outlaws who now infest it.—Chicago News.

How Whisky Eats Up Corn.

Five Illinois distilleries in the Fifth district are the largest in the world. To operate the largest of the five plants, having a capacity of 35,000 gallons of spirits daily, requires the corn from 100 acres, taking forty bushels to the acre. If all six of the central Illinois distilleries should be in operation at one time it would require the entire product of 1,000 acres for each day's run. Although corn is the principal grain consumed, rye is also taken in large quantities.—Argosaut.

Lowest Infant Death Rate.

New Zealand produces with its 4.1 per cent by far the lowest infant mortality rate in the world, London's record being about 11 per cent and Russia's nearly double that. In one town in New Zealand, Dunedin, where the Society for the Promotion of the Health of Women and Children started only six years ago, only 3.8 per cent of babies die in their first year.—London Globe.

Millions in Automobiles.

According to the Engineering News, the automobile factories of Detroit put out motorcars worth $550,000,000 last year. They have a total annual capacity of 400,000 automobiles, are capitalized at $100,000,000 and employ 120,000 persons, the weekly payroll being more than $1,500,000.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Fruit as Medicine.

The use of fruit diminishes the acidity of the body and thus antagonizes rheumatism and gout. The acids in fruits undergo changes which diminish the acidity of the blood and aid in the elimination of uric acid. The most digestible fruits are ripe grapes, peaches, strawberries, apricots, oranges, whortleberries, very ripe pears, steamed figs, dates, baked apples and stewed fruits.

A dietary consisting wholly of fruits is a valuable means of overcoming biliousness. Such a dietary may be maintained for one or two days or a week. A modified fruit dietary is highly beneficial. Two meals may be eaten, the breakfast of fruit only and the ordinary dinner, or, if three meals are taken, the first and last meals should consist of fruit only. The most laxative fruits are apples, figs, prunes, berries and peaches.

LURE OF THE ANTARCTIC.

Shackleton's Daring Scheme to Conquer the Ice Continent.

What is left of polar exploration now that both the poles have been discovered? What is there to tempt intrepid men to the ends of the earth now that the American and the Norwegian have planted flags on the apexes?

Apparently the last chapter has not even yet been written. Sir Ernest Shackleton, one of the gallant knights of the antarctic, has planned an expedition far more perilous than any of those undertaken by the searchers for the pole.

Amundsen, Scott and Shackleton himself elaborately planned their dashes to the antipodal summit. Amundsen reached his goal, Scott perished, and Shackleton was forced to turn back. Each of them prepared for his return by establishing a line of supply depots. Even the supply depots were insufficient to save the lives of Scott and his party. No man ever came near succeeding who had not thus provided for his retreat to his base of supplies.

Now Shackleton purposes not only to attain the pole, but to pass beyond it and to traverse the vast antarctic continent from shore to shore. His task will be exactly twice as difficult as that of the man who seeks and attains the pole. His course will be steadily forward; he will have no line of retreat.—Ohio State Journal.

A NEW WORLD MAP.

All Civilized Nations Have Combined to Make It a Success.

In 1900 a movement was begun looking to the preparation of a map of the world on a millonth scale, equal to fifteen miles to the inch. Such maps have already been made for some countries, particularly England and Scotland, but a map of the world on such a scale is an immense undertaking, and as such the different nations of the world were asked to co-operate in its production.

The first conference was held in London four years ago, and another international conference, participated in by government delegates of thirty-two countries, has been in session in Paris. Specimen sections of the map were presented at the conference, and further details of organized or international team work were gone over.

As the first map on such a scale and one requiring years for its completion and co-ordination of work in practically all the civilized countries of the world, the map will not only be the greatest ever constructed, but it will record the present status of geographical science as well.—New York World.

A Wonderful Bullet.

It is claimed by M. Rogozes, a Spaniard, that he has invented a marvelous bullet, destined to revolutionize the art of warfare, for, fired from an old smoothbore gun of 1830 pattern, with a charge of but nine grams of powder, it can destroy walls or houses at a distance of 1,200 yards, or discharged from a modern rifle, at a distance of over 3,000 yards. The bullet is seven inches long, pointed like an arrow and weighs about seven ounces. It is a diminutive shell rather than a bullet. One of its many qualities is that, though fired with black powder, not the faintest trace of smoke issues from the gun at its discharge. The bullet proceeds even from a smoothbore gun in a straight line, not in a series of loops, as it ought to do, according to the laws of ballistics.

The Eastern Veil.

A movement is on foot in Cairo for the emancipation of the Moslem woman and the discarding of the traditional veil. The leaders of this movement are young men who have studied in the colleges and universities of England and other European countries and who consider that the seclusion of the Egyptian and Moslem woman behind the veil has been the chief factor in keeping her in her present backward state.

Varicose Veins Tuberculous.

That varicose veins are a species of tuberculosis is the new theory advanced by Professor Landouzy, dean of the faculty of medicine, Paris. Before the Academy of Medicine in that city a few weeks ago he announced that he had found the Koch bacillus in the lesions of varicose veins and that guinea pigs inoculated with it developed tuberculosis.

P.P. Restrictions Abolished

The post office department at Ottawa have issued the following statement in regard to the parcel post service.

"From numerous enquiries received from the public on the subject of parcel post, it would seem desirable to emphasize the fact that all restrictions as regards weight
and delivery have been removed.

"Parcel post packets may now be mailed up to the weight of eleven pounds. It has been the intention to limit the weight of parcel post packets to six pounds
during the organization period, but as the organization of parcel post
was quickly made, heavier parcels have now been handled for some time, it having been determined to give the public the full benefit of this. Parcel post packets may therefore be mailed up to the limit
above stated.

"The additional fee of five cents
each, which was at first charged on parcels mailed for local delivery in places where the letter carrier delivery is in operation, has also been abolished, and this additional fee
is not now charged.

Fit-Reform Suits, the price is marked in the pocket, the same in Montreal as at Spooner's, Vulcan.

More Efficient Protection

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—It is with pleasure
that I read in your edition of the 29 inst., a letter from one of your leading citizens, P. W. L. Clark, with regard to Fire Protection.
This is a question which in most young towns is rarely given sufficient attention and is a very important feature, and I am glad to see Vulcan taking it up. The new fire hall is a credit to the town,
and I believe the equipment is ample for the present at least.

The idea, as formerly suggested,
and further advocated by Mr.
Clark, of keeping barrels of water in handy places is a splendid one, and if carried out I am sure will sometime save valuable property from nature's most destructive element.
In some cases though I am afraid
it is hardly practical, for a barrel
takes up space, and in a small house or crowded store it would be in the way. Why not invest in some good, patent fire extinguishing devices? They are not expensive, always handy on a bracket, easily carried to the scene of the fire, and do good work.

Another feature is the Conflagration Hazard. So many of our best towns in the province have suffered in the past twelve months—Athabasca Landing, Brooks, Strome,
and this year Didsbury and Gadsby
are only a few examples of heavy losers. Vulcan is one of the most enterprising and finest towns on the line, and it does not want to be added to the list. In Blocks 2 and 3, on Vulcan Street, the buildings are all very close together, and the
"exposure charges" make the rates
very high. If the property owners were to co-operate and build a Standard Fire Hall in the right place
they would find that their rates
would be so reduced that in due
time the wall would pay for itself,
and this hazard would be eliminated.
This wall must of course be up to the requirements, extending one foot above the highest point of the roof of the building on either side,
and to the rear as far as any 3rd, or 4th class building within 50 feet,
and to be built of brick, stone,
concrete or cement block, the thickness depending on the height.

Trusting that I have not taken up too much of your valuable space
and that these suggestions may be of material value; I am

CHARLES R. FRANCIS,
Inspector Canadian Fire
Insurance Co.

A Chinese Scholar

We publish the accompanying
as an evidence of what can be done
by perseverance. The writer of it is a Chinese boy who was in Vulcan
a little time ago, but has since removed to Travers. During his stay in this town, he came under the notice of one who was kind enough to constitute himself the boy's teacher, and gave him what schooling he could in the English language. The amount of schooling was under six months, and the letter is an eloquent testimony of the amount that was accomplished in that short time.
